ANCILLARY DWELLINGS

WHAT IS AN ANCILLARY DWELLING?

An ancillary dwelling (sometimes referred to as a 'granny flat') is defined by the Residential Design Codes (R-Codes) as a:

"Self-contained dwelling on the same site as a dwelling which may be attached to, integrated with or detached from the dwelling."

They are intended to support people living independently or semi-independently from the residents of the main house on the same site. Anyone can live in an ancillary dwelling; they don't need to be related to the resident of the main (primary) house.

DO I NEED DEVELOPMENT APPROVAL 'DA' (PLANNING APPROVAL)?

Not all ancillary dwellings require Development Approval (DA).

On land zoned 'Residential', you may be exempt from needing Development Approval where you comply with the provisions of the Residential Density Codes (R-Codes) including but not limited to required setbacks, site cover, height, visual privacy, access, and not exceeding 70m². See Residential Design Codes Volume 1 clause 5.5.1 (p.40) and R-codes vol 1 Explanatory Guidelines for more information.

On land zoned 'General Farming' or 'Small Holding', you are exempt from needing Development Approval under the Shire's Local Planning Scheme No. 9 where you comply with the requirements of SDEV CP100 – Local Planning Policy – Ancillary Dwellings, Grouped Dwellings and Caretakers Dwellings – Small Holding and General Farming Zones.

Clarification should be sought from the Shire of Dardanup prior to commencing any development on a property. Please see contact information on page 3.
